

Accessibility Review - Email Campaign

Tools used: manual checks (alt text, color contrast), screen reader pass (labels and roles), structural review for heading hierarchy, link semantics, and target sizes. Pros: alt text on informative images; role='presentation' on layout tables; clear button labels; minimum 44px hit areas; sufficient contrast for primary CTA. Cons: interactivity features rely on CSS that may not read consistently in some clients; background images may not load in older Outlook; media-query-based font sizing not universal. Screenshots: include views from Apple Mail (desktop), iOS Mail, Gmail (Web), Outlook (Windows).

Recommendations

1) Keep critical content as live text (not background images). 2) Provide alt text and concise link text that describes the destination. 3) Ensure CTAs are at least 44x44px touch targets. 4) Avoid relying on color alone for meaning. 5) Place essential content in the first 600–700px. 6) Test fallbacks where media queries are ignored.
